Judicial budget cuts mean furloughs, limited Drug Court

Courts close three days due to cuts

ERIN L. MCCOY

ernccoy@kystandard.com

Massive cuts to the state Judicial Branch budget will mean three furlough days for branch employees as well as cuts to Drug Court and other programs.

Local employees will feel the impact along with the rest of the state when Fiscal Year 2012-2013 kicks off July 1 with a $25.2 million cut in total available funds. Gov. Steve Beshear signed the budget April 11, and last week Kentucky Chief Justice John D. Minton Jr. announced how the department would handle the fund reduction.

Courthouses will be closed for furlough days statewide Aug. 6, Sept. 4 and Oct. 15 in an attempt to cut back on personnel costs, which comprise the great majority of Judicial Branch expenses. However, as elected officials, judges and circuit court clerks cannot be furloughed — meaning on a local level the furlough will mainly impact such employees as deputy circuit clerks.

Meanwhile, caps will be placed on the number of Drug Court participants and the Kentucky High School Mock Trial Tournament program will be eliminated entirely.

Circuit Clerk's Office

Budget cuts aren't new for the Judicial Branch, but according to local officials, they are becoming harder and harder to sustain.

"This is not the first year of our budget cuts. We've had cuts for several years in a row," Nelson County Circuit Court Clerk Diane Thompson said.

Deputy clerks haven't received pay raises since about 2008, and neither has she, Thompson said.

"And that's OK. They haven't complained," she added.

But according to Thompson, circuit clerks' offices throughout the state are understaffed, and have been for years.

"We haven't had to cut staff because we're already so understaffed," she said. "Since we started the new court system we've never had enough staff."

Kentucky's current court system was created in 1976. This year's furloughs mark the first in the modern system's history.

At this time, the Nelson

Citizen claims Bardstown refuses to pick up brush pile

Said they've cleared piles in past

Charlene Davis has a large pile of brush at the end of her front yard that she said the city of Bardstown refuses to pick up.

What began as a task to clear the brush in her backyard at 2218 Elmcrest Drive has turned into a sticky situation.

"I rarely put any (brush) out front," Davis said. "When I do clear some of it, now it's a big issue?"

According to Davis, she cleared out a tree in her front yard almost two weeks ago. Once her work was finished, she laid the remaining branches in a pile at the end of her driveway and city workers picked it up without any question during a drive-by pick-up.

However, the city refused to pick up the second brush pile in Davis' lawn. She complained to the city April 24, a few weeks passed and the brush pile wasn't picked up.

Now, Davis is befuddled on why the city would pick up brush in one instance and not another.

"If they're changing the law, they need to inform the citizens," she said. "There are so many inconsistencies, some are taken and others aren't."

When asked about the situation, Bardstown Public Works Superintendent Ben Burd refused to comment on the matter.

"I'm not getting into that mess," he said.

Burd directed comments toward Barbie Bryant, executive assistant to Sheckles,

New Haven Library opening

Dozens of people turned out for the grand opening of the Nelson County Public Library New Haven Branch Sunday afternoon. The library is outfitted with a custom three-paned stained glass window that tells the story of New Haven, along with a fireplace and cozy reading spaces.

Lightning strike sparks garage fire Saturday

emccoy@kystandard.com

Only four brick walls remained standing after a garage on Lutheran Church Road caught fire Saturday morning after a reported lightning strike.

When Bardstown-Nelson County firefighters arrived on scene around 2 a.m. Saturday, the 1,200-square-foot detached garage at 1183 Lutheran Church Road was fully engulfed.

“It was totally on fire. The roof was almost totally gone,” Sgt. Paul Vance said.

The fire department had been notified after a neighbor spotted the blaze.

“The neighbor had called it in. She said there was a real loud lightning strike right next to her house, and said that her computer blew up and her TV burned up,” Vance said.

Firefighters set about suppressing the fire but there was little they could do.

“Everything inside it was lost,” Vance said.

It was too dangerous for firefighters to enter the building and ensure the fire was completely out.

“The brick was not stable because it had nothing holding it up, and the front of the building was kind of bowed, and I didn’t want my personnel inside,” Vance said.

The fire department was called back out at 11:53 a.m. because an insurance representative at the building spotted a few areas that were still smoldering.

Jaws of Life used to pry man from car

One injured in collision on North Third Street

STAFF REPORT

The Jaws of Life were administered after a two-car collision trapped an 89-year-old man in his car around 10 a.m. on 616 North Third Street Monday morning.

Emmett Barnes, 89, was operating a Ford Taurus on North Third Street. Deborah Bailey was operating a 2004 white Chevrolet Malibu in the opposite lane of travel.

According to Bardstown Police Officer Bill Buckman, Barnes pulled in front of Bailey, which caused their vehicles to collide.

Bardstown-Nelson County Fire Department workers use the Jaws of Life to retrieve Emmett Barnes from his vehicle on North Third Street Monday morning.

Buckman added that the Bardstown-Nelson County Fire Department administered the Jaws of Life to retrieve Barnes from his vehicle.

Barnes was then transported to Flaget Memorial Hospital where he was treated for arm and head injuries.

Bailey was not injured in the accident.

“It was a little smoking area maybe some insulation that was underneath some metal that we couldn’t get to,” Vance said.

Those areas were doused and quickly put out.

The lightning strike on Lutheran Church Road came only about 10 minutes after a severe thunderstorm warning was issued, and Vance said he heard other reports of loud thunder around that same time.

In fact, the fire department was called to the Nelson County Area Technology Center for an alarm at 1:52 a.m. There were no problems at the school, and Vance said the alarm may have been triggered by another lightning strike in the area.

'The Avengers'

Get your thrill in a minute, in 2D and 3D

The most powerful of superheroes come together to battle a mythic super-villain in the presence of Loki (Tom Hiddleston). Nick Fury (Samuel L. Jackson) is director of S.H.I.E.L.D., an international peace-keeping agency comprised of Marvel's Super Heroes: Iron Man (Robert Downey, Jr.), The Incredible Hulk (Mark Ruffalo), Thor (Chris Hemsworth), Captain America (Chris Evans), Hawkeye (Jeremy Renner), and Black Widow (Scarlett Johansson). Each hero has a unique power which makes them an almost unbeatable team. But they do not know the power of Loki, the brother of good guy Thor from Norse Asgard. Loki has unfinished business with Thor and his brothers. "The Avengers" displays lots of possibilities but depends upon the charisma and double-dealing of our villain. And Hiddleston works as Loki. You'll love to hate him. In addition, Loki has used his power to control new film hero Hawkeye, a master archer, plus a scientist (Stellan Skarsgard) who has a history with the heroes. Before the group can begin to battle the villainous alien hordes, they must learn to forget past enmities and play together nicely. These rough-and-tumble spats are hilarious to watch with violence reigning supreme. Actually it is very difficult to take this seriously with Iron Man throwing out humorous jabs continually. But for the most part, the heroes play with great seriousness and ironic humor. We've seen Downey, Jr. as Iron Man before and he continues in great form. Renner is new as Hawkeye, and though we see little of him as a villain when he regains his senses, he is quite super-human in establishing the character. Hemsworth is even more godly as Thor and we can see how his half-brother, Loki, would hate him. You know — sibling rivalry. Ruffalo appears as Dr. Banner, the alter-ego of the Hulk, and makes the contrast between the two very earnest, and for the first time the 'big green one' is truly frightening. Can Chris Evans be more stalwart as Captain America? Johanssen carries her share of the battles. Of course, the door is left open for another sequel and we can expect to see more individual Avenger films. There are two surprises during the closing credits. One is a warning and the second, at the very, very end, is another bit of super-hero humor.

Family Rating: PG-13 for intense sequences of sci-fi violence and action throughout. No language problems. Also starring Clark Gregg, Cobie Smulders, Gwyneth Paltrow, Harry Dean Stanton, Robert Clohessy, and Lou Ferrigno voicing The Hulk. Directed and written by Joss Whedon. A wildly rousing musical score by Alan Silvestri. (2 hr. 22 min.) some sexuality and violence.

LINDA IRELAND
LANDMARK NEWS SERVICE

Sunday afternoon, the LaRue County Sheriff's Department investigated the report of two vehicles spotted in the middle of the Rolling Fork River in LaRue County. The cars appeared to have been washed downstream by floodwaters, according to a news release. Campers, who were not identified in the news release, had pitched a tent on a gravel barge and parked the cars on the barge in the river on May 4. When heavy rain moved in on May 5, the campers were unable to move the cars due to the rapid rising of the river. They were able to get out safely that night, despite 10 to 12 feet of flood waters. The vehicles were moved by a local towing company May 6. The sheriff's office identified the owners of the vehicles by contacting property owners. Dep. Brian Smith, Dep. Robbie Brownfield and Chief Dep. Russell McCoy investigated.

When is spanking considered abusive?

A recent incident in which police responded to a complaint of a grandmother hitting her grandchildren in Wendy's has brought up the controversy surrounding parents who choose corporal punishment to discipline their children.

In the case that was in the paper last week, the police were called after the grandmother was seen hitting her grandchildren with a paint stirrer. The police came, checked out the children and the grandmother and her grandchildren went on their way. No one was arrested and a report wasn't made. According to the police, spanking isn't against the law and they didn't see anything about the situation that made them worry about the safety of the children.

After the incident, the grandmother called The Standard to report what had happened. She saw the incident as an indication of what's happening in society as a whole. In today's society, Mary Mitchell thinks many families are steering clear of disciplining their children, which often leads to a plethora of other issues that can create problems in the future.

Bardstown Police Chief Rick McCubbin said the department receives several calls each week about parents disciplining their children. All claims are investigated with many turning out to be nothing out of the ordinary or dangerous for the child. The thought of having the police called for just spanking a child has some parents reconsidering how they discipline in public.

Schools have also backed down from discipline, with most opting to find other forms of correcting behavior rather than corporal punishment such as spanking. Whether that decision has created more behavior problems with students is part of the debate. For now, it doesn't look like schools will be making any changes to their discipline procedures to once again include paddling.

But for parents, the debate continues. Is there any point when it's OK to spank a child?

Most of us grew up in an era when spankings were just a way of life. Whether it was with a belt, a flyswatter, a switch you had to cut yourself or the handle of a brush, most of us faced the possibilities of a whipping when we were out of line. The threats and the possibilities were what kept us in line most days.

But as the generational gap widens between those who were spanked and those who don't believe in corporal punishment, the debate continues. Now, timeouts are preferred to spankings by most childrearing professionals.

But that doesn't mean all are going to abide by that structure of discipline. So what happens to those who choose to spank a child in public? Since it's not illegal what's the recourse for those who go too far?

It's all a matter of common sense. The police said each reported incident is investigated. So if you think a parent or an adult has gone too far in disciplining the child in their care, then call the police. But let's use common sense when we call. All of us know the limits of what we think has gone too far.

Not all superheroes wear capes

Superheroes are standing amongst us each and every day. While they may not have any superhuman powers or wear an interesting costume, they certainly know how to look into the face of danger without any hesitation.

As a kid, I always imagined superheroes to be like the ones on TV. They were involved in a potentially horrific accident, i.e. bitten by a radioactive spider. From the accident, they inherit superhuman abilities and become practically invincible.

In each episode or movie, superheroes are often at war with a particular villain whose main goal is to gain control of the earth and spread his or her evil ways.

Lo and behold, super heroes break through a crowd of people to the villain, a fight ensues and somehow, the villain is overthrown. Nothing seems to stand in the superheroes' way on their pursuit to justice.

Once they wrap up fighting, super heroes dust off their shoulder and prepare to do the same thing again tomorrow. The citizens cheer happily as the superhero flies away. Essentially, the hero is a symbol of hope and for a better tomorrow.

It's through their heroic actions that give citizens the notion that, through all the evil in this world, good people will prevail.

While Hollywood's version of superheroes may not actually exist, super heroes exist all around us. They're servicemen and women fighting overseas, police officers who continually put their lives on the line, EMS workers and doctors who never give up as they try to save someone's life or firefighters who work through blistering heat to relinquish a blaze. It's the hard working parents who work numerous jobs to create a prosperous life for their children. It's the person who has a positive attitude while fighting a disease. It's the person who won't let a disability stand in the way of his or her dreams. It's the person who sets a good example for their children. It's the young men and women who take out countless student loans just so they can get a college degree. It's the high school student who is highly involved in the community while maintaining good grades or it's a young adult who's trying to make it in the real world after graduating college.

All of these examples scratch upon the surface of the magnitude of superheroes in this world. Each and every person in society has the ability to serve as a superhero — all they have to do is make good choices and set the right example for those around them.

For those wishing to find their own superhero, all they need to do is look a little harder and they'll find that superheroes are all around us. They're just blended in with the rest of society because they don't wear a mask, fly around or have magic powers.

To be spanked or not to be spanked

There is such a controversy on the subject of discipline and how it is administered in rearing your children. Some say they do not believe in spanking because it teaches a child how to hit and others believe in spare the rod, spoil the child or as in Proverbs 13:24 "Whoever spares the rod hates his son, but he who loves him is diligent to discipline him."

The line between the two can be thin or very widespread depending on your level of the manner in how you want to raise your children.

A co-worker told me those who abuse children, pedophiles and/or molesters have ruined it for good parenting practices. In a way I must agree. All of us are extremely protective of our children, due to these types of people and we dare a teacher or someone with whom our child doesn't have a relationship to even say anything to them, nevertheless put their hands on them. And I am as guilty as the next parent.

But are we really protecting them or are we creating a little monster?

Spanking or corporal (physical) punishment has always been a target of dissension. Most children from my generation did get spanked as part of a punishment depending on the incident or behavior, as well as being grounded. No television or going outside to play was the typical grounding but now with more advanced technology there is a lot more you can take away, be it a cell phone, computer or gaming systems.

When people talk about situations involving out of control children or adolescents, it is varying opinions of how that particular parent is handling the situation.

According to WebMd, a column on health and parenting describes the types of parent:

1) An authoritative parent has clear expectations and consequences and is affectionate toward his or her child. The authoritative parent allows for flexibility and collaborative problem solving with the child when dealing with behavioral challenges. This is the most effective form of parenting.

2) An authoritarian parent has clear expectations and consequences, but shows little affection toward his or her child. The parent may say things such as, "because I'm the Mommy, that's why." This is a less effective form of parenting.

3) A permissive parent shows lots of affection toward his or her child but provides little discipline. This is a less effective form of parenting.

In my opinion, a lot of disciplinary methods do begin in the parent's childhood and how they were raised.

When I became pregnant, I thought there were how-to books on everything to do with every stage of having a baby and after it was born. Now it seems everyone has an opinion on what is the wrong way or right way in the raising of children, from discipline to education.

Be it as it may, I do think it's important to give children boundaries and any punishment should benefit the incident.

Discipline is the method of instructing your child on what kind of behavior is acceptable and what type is not. Basically, discipline shows a child about rules and how to follow them. Discipline should involve punishment and rewards. It does sound easier said than done, but it can become frustrating sometimes with issues concerning children and discipline.

I read an article in the paper last week in regards to a grandmother disciplining her children in a public place and authorities were called due to someone believing it to be excessive or abusive. Well, I wasn't there and I cannot give an opinion on what was witnessed but I am glad everything worked out for the kids as well as the grandmother. As the officer said, he wished more people would discipline their children. And I agree with her opinion on how our society is allowing some children to run amok and we are creating a self-destructive environment.

The rods of discipline can be used sparingly but the love needs to be spread lavishly.

No prejudice, just the truth

To the editor:
My letter to the editor a few days ago was apparently misinterpreted by some as prejudice. The facts are that the mayor violated the ordinance on special meetings and tried to work around other ordinances to get his way. The president has tried, and unfortunately succeeded, in doing the same thing. I assumed, wrongly perhaps, that our mayor observed the president's misuse of power and followed his example. I apologize for that. It was naive of me to think that our mayor would have just out of the blue, with no influence, try to ignore the laws of the city and state, but I concede that he could bring corruption to the office on his own with no influence.

Yes, it is true that he is not a "one man show." He wasn't when he was on the city council either and therefore should already know the rules. Also, I wrote a letter to the editor with our last mayor on his violation of ordinances as well, and Donan took a hit from me then as well, so it isn't about skin color, it's about either being a true role model for everyone and standing up and following the laws or showing lack of character, and leadership, and circumventing them.

So, Mr. Mayor, which will it be with you?

Spare judgments about pit bulls

To the editor:
After reading the April 20 paper beyond the story "Pit bull attacks woman, kills her dog." There was "April 12 two pit bulls reported to be jumping and snapping at kids on Lucy Drive." Well, I want to set the facts straight. Those pit bulls are my six-month-old puppies. They have 'never' bitten anyone! Both have been raised with five kids!

First, to all who are quick to judge: Both my pit bulls are in an 8-foot tall padlocked fence (to prevent them from being stolen). While my husband and I were away from home, someone cut their fence open and cut their collars off. I found my female pit bulls on Beth Drive, but still have not found my males.

Second, the only reason the cops as well as the dog warden were called was because there were "two boys chasing them (my pit bulls) with ball bats." I know this because the wonderful volunteers at NCHS questioned me about it. I am extremely upset about that. Even Larry Wimsett, dog warden, found my pit bulls "friendly and well taken care of." So for someone to act that way because "the breed" my dogs are is wrong.

Which brings me to my third point. All those who label pit bulls as "vicious and temperamental" need to step back and realize something ... "all animals were once wild creatures!" All have instincts giving them potential to turn aggressive. In my opinion, it's not just "the breed," it is how you, as the owner, raise the dog. Just like humans, animals learn from what they see, experience and are taught. For those who might not understand, let me put it in a different view:

You have two children with two different parents. One parent raises one child to be polite, respectful, well disciplined, and has morals. While the other parent raises the other child to be rude, disrespectful, deceitful, is not disciplined or given consequences for their actions. Now, which child do you think will be a more successful person in life? Again, my opinion, I know by personal experience it is the same with dogs.

As for those who choose to remain judgmental, there is only one who can judge me and that's God himself.

Five NCHS Juniors accepted to GSP program

Five Nelson County High School juniors have been accepted to the Kentucky Governor's Scholars Program this year.

Joseph Cesare, Ashton Cooper, Daniella Godenzi, Marthianne Hassell and Madison Spalding were notified by the GSP program that they have been accepted to attend the highly selective summer program. Additionally, a sixth student, Landon Foster, has been selected as an alternate for the program that involves five weeks of study at one of three Kentucky colleges and universities.

Participating schools include Bellarmine University, Louisville; Centre College, Danville and Murray State University, Murray, KY.

Cesare is the son of Mark and Tamara Cesare, New Hope. Cooper is the daughter of Dennis Reynolds and Megan Cooper, Bloomfield. Godenzi is the daughter of Rodolfo Godenzi and Giselle Godenzi, Bardstown. Hassell is the daughter of Kurt and Wilhelmina Hassell, Bardstown. Spalding is the daughter of James and Lori Spalding, Bardstown. Foster is the son of Wayne and Kimberly Foster, Bardstown.

Prospective Scholars have until May 1 to accept or decline their appointments. The GSP has until May 27 to notify Scholars of campus and focus area assignments.

In the application process, students indicated three focus areas from a list of 23 study options in which they were most interested.

The five-week program does not cost anything. There are no grades and there will be no college credit, but the benefits are priceless for gaining admittance to this highly competitive and rigorous program.

While participating in the Scholars program, students live on campus in dorms and study in classes taught by university professors on the campus to which they have been assigned.

This year 1,060 scholars were accepted from among 1,919 applicants, statewide. High schools were limited to a specific number of applicants they could sponsor, based on enrollment. With 331 Juniors, NCHS was allowed to nominate just 14 students for the program.

Johnny Warren, managing artistic director of the Stephen Foster Drama Association, is thrilled. “We’re definitely honored to be included in the top,” Warren said. “The promotional campaign is designed to showcase one-of-a-kind (venues) and that’s true about The Stephen Foster Story.” Warren added that the musical is a unique show that is the only one of its kind. “(Bardstown) is the only place it happens,” he noted. A main benefit that comes from being listed in the new Kentucky tourism campaign is the amount of exposure it will bring to the “Stephen Foster Story.” “It’s definitely going to expand our reach to potential audiences inside and outside the state,” Warren said. The “Stephen Foster Story” is an outdoor show that will run June 9- Aug. 11 at My Old Kentucky Home State Park. The show features music and costumes reminiscent of the 1850s. Some of the featured songs include “Oh! Susanna,” “Camptown Races,” “Beautiful Dreamer” and “My Old Kentucky Home.” According to a press release, the concept of “There’s Only One Kentucky,” is to draw visitors to Kentucky and then encourage them to explore all the state has to offer. The campaign differentiates

Kentucky from other destinations by emphasizing attractions and events that travelers to and within the commonwealth can experience that cannot be replicated anywhere else. Some of the other additions to the “There’s Only One Kentucky” include the Kentucky Bourbon Trail in Central Kentucky, the Beer Cheese Festival in Winchester, Ale-8-One in Winchester, the American Saddlebred Museum in Lexington, the American Printing House for the Blind in Louisville, Creation Museum in Petersburg, Great American Dollhouse Museum in Danville, Headley-Whitney Museum in Lexington, Kentucky Down Under in Horse Cave, Kentucky Show! in Louisville, Pikeville Cut-

Melody Lake home damaged by fire

emccoy@kystandard.com

Two rooms of a Melody Lake home were gutted by fire Saturday morning. The New Hope Fire Department was dispatched to a single-family home at 61 Dogwood Trail at 7:19 a.m. Saturday. “It started on the outside of the house,” Chief Michael Corbett said. “You can see where it went up the wall and went inside his attic.” Corbett was able to trace the fire back to the area of a four-wheeler that was against the house. The homeowner said the four-wheeler had been malfunctioning, so according to Corbett, that could have been the source of the fire. Lightning also could have caused the fire — heavy storms had rolled through the area overnight, and a light drizzle continued as firefighters arrived on scene. The kitchen and another room, possibly a bedroom, were heavily damaged. About three-quarters of the house remains livable, but the home could be a total loss, according to Corbett. The four-wheeler and a boat were also destroyed. Nobody was injured in the fire. The homeowner, an Iraq war veteran, was able to exit the house along with his wife and children in time. “Luckily he woke up and smelled smoke,” Corbett said. The Rolling Fork Fire Department provided mutual aid. Fifteen firefighters responded between the two departments. New Hope firefighter and EMT Kay Inman estimated they were on scene about two hours.

Mills Road. Kauffman had his wife call 911. Kauffman accompanied Loren Seely back to the scene of the accident. Clarkson Fire Department and Grayson County EMS responded to the scene at 1:35 p.m. The firemen walked down the gravel road to the scene of the accident and immediately told dispatch to contact the coroner.

EMS and Hudson rode in a four wheel drive truck along with Clarkson Fire Department down to the accident, where Kenton Seely was pronounced deceased. According to Hudson, the cause of death was traumatic asphyxia. For a complete obituary on Kenton Seely see page A3.

Cuts

County Circuit Clerk's Office has 14 deputy clerks. It is funded for 16, but cannot hire two more because of a hiring freeze. But according to Thompson's calculations, she would need 18 and a half deputies to be at full staff.

Statewide, however, the Judicial Branch has pared back staff, cutting 282 employees since 2008.

Dealing with important legal documents in such an environment can pose risks.

"They are critical documents and the more they're rushed and the more they're pushed — it really troubles me," Thompson said, pointing out that making a mistake in her office could mean serious consequences — the wrong person getting arrested and charged with a crime, for instance.

But the quality of her staff has prevented that from happening, Thompson said.

District 14 Sen. Jimmy Higdon, who sat on the Senate budget committee, said steep cuts were made across the board — an approximate 8.6 percent cut for all three branches of government. The legislature did not specify which programs within the budget should be cut.

"I supported the budget and had no idea that it would be implemented this way. I thought that there would be other savings the chief justice could find rather than furloughing people, so I'm disappointed," Higdon said.

Drug Court

Circuit Judge Charles C. Simms III said cuts to Drug Court, which he heads for Nelson, LaRue and Hart counties, could have negative impacts for law enforcement and participants.

"It's a bad thing for Drug Court, no doubt about that. We have averaged 25 people in our Drug Court and now we're capped at 21," he said. Current participants won't be excluded but numbers will need to be cut eventually.

The change makes it hard for Drug Court participants to move residences, because many other programs are just as full and can't admit anyone else, Simms explained.

"Almost everybody had more people than what we were capped for," Simms said of other programs.

And with limits on how many people can participate, more people might stay in jail as a result. Simms cited a recent example of a woman who would have been eligible for Drug Court who now won't be able to participate. She needs the structure Drug Court offers, he explained.

"She'll stay in prison because I don't feel comfortable ... granting her shock probation," Simms said.

That could transfer more costs onto the Department of Corrections — apparently running counter to last year's House Bill 463, which sought to cut jail and prison populations by offering alternative modes of rehabilitation.

"It really shows how near-sighted the legislature was, because in essence they're saying too many people [are] in prison but then they're stopping Drug Court, which is probably one of the best vehicles they have for keeping people out of prison," Simms said.

The frequency with which participants are drug tested will also be reduced, which Simms believes could make the program less effective.

"I don't know how much more the Judicial Branch can take," Simms said. "They've cut to the bone now."

A longer jail stay?

Pretrial officers will have the day off on furlough days, too. While they generally have 12 hours after arrest to set a person's bond, on furlough days they may have 48 hours, according to Nelson County Jailer Dorcas Figg.

That means a person arrested on or right before a furlough day may be in for a longer jail stay than normal.

Meanwhile, furlough days will interrupt court schedules, and possibly delay how quickly judges can hear motions and arraignments. Simms said his schedule — particularly for LaRue and Hart counties, which he visits two days a month each — will have to be rearranged and could impact the amount of time people spend in jail. The same holds true for Circuit Court Judge John David Seay and District Court Judge Robert Heaton.

Budget troubles

As high unemployment continues, revenue remains flat and more people qualify for Medicaid, cuts to state government have become necessary, Higdon asserted.

"I helped work on the budget and based on what we budgeted for and based on what they had to spend in the last biennium, it seemed that what we budgeted was sufficient for them in this biennium," Higdon said of the Judicial Branch budget. "Across state government that's pretty much the same cut that everybody else took."

Yet Judicial Branch salaries have been lower than wages for comparable positions in the other branches of government for years.

"There's no reason to me why a secretary in the Judicial Branch should make less money than a secretary in the Executive Branch or a secretary in the Legislative Branch," Simms said.

It's a problem Higdon said he's committed to addressing, "but right now is not the appropriate time to do it."

And although judges and circuit clerks haven't gotten pay raises for several years, state law requires annual salary adjustments for inflation for local judge executives, jailers and county clerks.

"They will be the only people in state government this year that receive wage increases," Higdon said.

Rumors that the cut was in retaliation for the state Supreme Court's ruling against the legislature's redistricting plan have little foundation in Higdon's eyes.

"I sat on the budget committee in the Senate and there was never a word about being vindictive about the redistricting," he said. He added that he didn't know whether anything to that effect happened behind closed doors.

Thompson emphasized that she understands the state and the Supreme Court are facing tough economic times. She's seen evidence of the economic crisis in increased foreclosures and people unable to pay their fines since as early as 2004 — long before the media picked up on the news. And things don't look to be getting any better, she added.

"In my heart I know our chief justice would not have made the decision to furlough employees and close down the Kentucky Courts if he had any other options," she said.

Hogan heads girls' hoops

TOM DEKLE

Coaching basketball and working in an automotive plant go hand-in-hand, according to Dwayne Hogan, the newly named girls basketball coach for Thomas Nelson High School.

“When you work in an automotive plant, it’s wide open all the time. Coaching is also wide open all the time. It’s the same thing, just a different arena,” Hogan said.

That sort of attitude will fit right at TNHS, according to Athletic Director Harold Dugan.

“People that are in business have a true perspective on winning and losing. He’s a fundamentalist, but mostly his program is about hard work,” Dugan said. “He’s a tireless worker. I think he is a great hire. He will lead our program to where it needs to be.”

“Mr. Hogan’s strong work ethic and dedication to the youth of this community will allow great success for our future Generals,” agreed fellow TNHS AD, Sara Thurmond. “He embodies our core value of responsibility and with that, he will build our girls’ basketball program by making them

Commitment and vision are among the qualities Thomas Nelson High School principal Wes Bradley is trying to tap with his selection of a golf coach.

Randy Pinkston, a local golf store owner and special education teacher at Nelson County High School, brings that and more to the table, Bradley said in naming Pinkston to the TNHS coaching staff.

“He is a great community member that has an authentic motivation in supporting our Generals,” Bradley said, “and he shows a strong alignment with our coaching vision.”

Pinkston also intends to bring “enthusiasm” and “fun” to the mix in a sport that many characterize as endlessly challenging.

“Mr. Pinkston’s vision for the Thomas Nelson golf team is exceptional. He brings enthusiasm to the game and strives to increase participation at all skill levels. We are fortunate to have another strong leader join our Thomas Nelson community,” said TNHS athletic director Sara Thurmond.

5TH REGION TENNIS

JILL PICKETT/Landmark News Service

Bethlehem's Sarah Ulrich plays in at the net as her doubles partner Kaila Coots watches in their opening round match of the 5th Region Tennis Tournament on Saturday at University Drive Park in Elizabethtown.

Rough time for locals in early rounds

pzubaty@kystandard.com

ELIZABETHTOWN — Local teams produced six first-round winners Saturday at the 5th Region Tennis Championships at the University Drive Park courts, but only a pair of Bardstown entrants survived into the quarterfinals after Monday’s play.

Clayton Brooks, the Tiger senior seeded No. 4 in the boys’ singles draw, was still alive as of press time Tuesday with a chance to make a repeat trip to the state tournament. Brooks — who qualified last year as a doubles player — got through Meade County’s Tate Wilson in a tight three sets Saturday (6-1, 4-6, 6-4), then kept his state hopes alive with a second-round win Monday over John Hardin’s Carson McCann, 6-1, 6-3.

Brooks was in action Tuesday against Central Hardin’s Kevin Britt, who already has one seeded victim under his belt after an upset Saturday of No. 6 Mark Harris of Taylor County. A win there would mean a return trip to state.

The other local entrant still alive as of Tuesday’s quarterfinals was the girls’ doubles squad of Anna Jones and Riley Smith. Jones made it to state last season, and is looking to take a new partner this time around, and thus far the duo has had a relatively easy go of it, dropping just two games Saturday in a first-round win over John Hardin’s Brianna Anderson and Kristine Herrera. They were even better Monday, losing just one game while blitzing past Fort Knox’s Nadine Stacey and Brianna Quichocho.

Jones and Smith were in action after press time Tuesday in search of a state berth against Meade County’s Mallory Brown and Kayla Keith, who upset LaRue County’s No. 3 seed Amelia Miller and Paige Nalley in Saturday’s first round.

Second round highlights

Nelson County’s boys’ doubles squad of Jackson Thompson and Tanner Stallings stretched Marion County’s Ryker Cassidy and Michael Spalding to the limit before falling to the No. 5 seed in three sets, 4-6, 7-5, 6-3.

“I felt like they had to change their game, change their plan and hit to the sides,” said Stallings, whose long-armed net play made life difficult on the Knights’ duo. Stallings was regularly set up by a hot-serving Thompson.

“I serve, he volleys — that’s just the way we play,” said Thompson, who wondered what might have been had the two teamed up earlier. “Couple more (matches) and we’d

OUTDOOR TALES

If this old boat could only talk

I’ve always loved being around water. Fishing and boating have always been at the top of my list of pastimes.

Over the years, nearly every place the Junkers have lived has been on or near the water. There were a few exceptions in my early years, but in the last four decades a couple hundred yards has been the farthest we have been from a spot to cast a lure or launch a boat.

During that time, I’ve always owned a boat. Most were purchased used. I’ve had canoes, small sailboats, pontoon, ski, and fishing boats. Today, I still have a fold-up Portabote.

Late last fall, I saw a small 10-foot, aluminum john boat at a yard sale. Figured it would slip easily into the back of my old truck, and thought it would be ideal to paddle around the small lake where we currently spend warm weather. I could picture myself casting Roadrunners and Beetlespins to the bass, crappie and bluegill as the sun settled behind the trees to the west.

I even purchased a small Minn-Kota trolling motor and a new battery to help propel my new (to me) fishing machine.

The boat did easily fit into the back of the old Chevy. I was right. That was good news.

However, the boat didn’t work for this fat, old, unstable outdoor writer.

I attempted to launch it, and was sure motor battery, rod and reel, and old man were going to end up in the drink. It was totally unstable for this guy, and it seemed the water level was only about six inches below the side. (Try before you buy.)

So what was Plan B?

In the meantime, my 14-year-old grandson thinks the boat is great. He spent a couple days paddling it around the lake. But then, he weighs half or less than this old biscuit and gravy eater.

Plan B was to look on the Internet for another small boat, but one not quite so small.

I actually found several within a reasonable distance of home, and decided to check one out. The young owner said the older aluminum boat had comfortably and stably held he, his wife, and young son.

Upon arrival at his home, I looked over the boat. It looked much like many I had seen years ago at various fishing camps.

Quickly, I made the decision to buy it. It appeared it would meet my need, but something else also attracted me. Isaiah Bowling, the owner, had found a very old magazine advertisement about the boat. It indicated the boat was a Pioneer and manufactured in Middlebury, Ind.

I wish the boat could tell its story. How many big fish have been pulled over its sides? Where has it traveled to? What lakes? Who took it to picnics and shady sandbars? Did anyone ever fall overboard? How old is the boat?

A guess would be it was built in the 1950s.

The old advertisement called Pioneer Boats, “America’s most advanced line of metal boats ...”

“Rounded V-bow with flat bottom design provides the smoothest ride

Hogan, plant manager for LB Mfg. LLC of Springfield, began his coaching career in 2003 as head girls’ coach for the U10 Nelson County Playmakers.

After putting together that inexperienced young team and experiencing a less than stellar first year, Hogan coached them through two more years of steady improvement, and ended up winning the Kentucky state championship in his third year with the same girls as a U12 team.

Dwayne Hogan was named head girls’ basketball coach for Thomas Nelson High School Tuesday.

had a state tournament” berth.

The match was a testy one with several disagreements on line calls, to the point that tournament officials sent out neutral observers to make line calls.

Also falling in Monday’s second round were Riley Coots, Bethlehem’s lone remaining entrant, as well as Bardstown’s Hannah Welch and Nelson County’s Savannah Wimsatt, all to seeded players. Nelson’s girls’ doubles squad of Ying Chan and Adrienne Roark also made it through to the second round but were cut down by the No. 2 seed, Ashlee O’Brien and Ashley Thomas of Central Hardin, 6-3, 6-1.

First round highlights

Nelson County’s Wimsatt and Bardstown’s Emalea Bischoff played the match of the first round — if not the entire tournament — in their three-hour, 17-minute marathon Saturday.

Wimsatt managed to ground out a 6-7 (2-7), 7-5, 6-3 win, but the Cardinal junior said her all-too-familiar Tiger opponent brought out her best.

“It took forever,” she said. “I think I went home and slept for the rest of the day.”

Wimsatt said similar styles and the fact they’ve played so many times over the years led to a thriller, but it was the type of grueling, exhausting match that forces a player to dig deep.

“Sometimes, all you can do is pray,” she said. “That’s Hogan went on to coach at Nelson County High School (2006-2010) where he served as assistant girls’ basketball coach, head junior varsity coach and head freshmen coach, before moving on to Bloomfield Middle School where he was head girls’ basketball coach and assistant boys’ basketball coach in 2011-2012.

For Hogan, the important thing is to get in the gym and work steadily to improve, year in and year out.

“As long as you have a little athleticism, you can teach the rest of the game,” he said.

But as a coach, for Hogan the ultimate compliment is for a player to learn how to succeed outside of basketball. “When you touch someone’s life outside of basketball, through basketball, that’s really special,” he said.

At Thomas Nelson, Hogan believes the biggest initial challenge will be to taking a young, very inexperienced team learning how to play, and “teaching these kids the kind of effort it’s going to take to be successful at this level,” Hogan said.

“I want us to be the toughest team around — mentally and physically,” Hogan said. “You don’t have to have the most talent. You have to be the best team. I want to have on my team a lot of smart, tough players.”

that players can pursue for the rest of their life and all the while continue developing new skills.

“It is probably the most challenging game you can play,” Pinkston said. “No matter how good you are, you can always improve.”

“You’re always still learning and always trying to get better,” he said. “It’s a great challenge but it is a game that if you work hard at it, you’ll benefit.”

Over his 20 years as a player and 11 years as owner of a golf facility, Pinkston has amassed a tremendous amount of experience working with golf clinics and with a variety of age groups.

The sport is very accessible for younger ages, and Pinkston intends to work with players as young fifth-grade to build interest and start developing skills.

Beyond the physical aspects of the sport, Pinkston is also interested in developing the mental aspects of the game among his players.

Whether a golfer is playing good or bad, it is important to learn how to “stay in the moment” and focus on the current challenge, not the last shot, Pinkston said.

Pinkston is a graduate of NCHS and the University of Louisville.

Randy Pinkston has been selected to lead the Thomas Nelson High School golf squad. A golfer for 20 years, Pinkston owns a golf shop in Bardstown and is a teacher at Nelson County High School.

“Endorsed for 40 years by leading summer camps and resorts.”

From a brief Internet search I learned Pioneer had been located at 125 Perry Street, In Middlebury, Ind., and was purchased in 1972 by Jayco Manufacturing, well-known builder of Jayco trailers. I have contacted Jayco in an attempt to learn more, but haven’t received a response.

I also discovered there currently is a Pioneer boat company on the east coast, but it doesn’t appear to have any relationship, except the same name.

The former owners, Isaiah and Joni Bowling, enjoyed the boat, and I’m sure others did as well. Now I own the old boat, and would love to hear from anyone who knows anything more about the lineage of Pioneer boats.

Break out the shade devices early to help your crops

Boy, from the frying pan into the fire these first few weeks of May! The vegetable garden will be responding — for better and for worse — to temperatures in the upper 80s so early in the season. One thing we can do to alleviate a little heat stress is to employ some shade devices for our spring crops and seedlings.

The vegetable garden can start doing some funny things during a heat wave. When temperatures start to rise into the upper 80s and 90s many vegetables drop flowers before pollination and fruit set; and stop blooming altogether. Beans, tomatoes and eggplant do like it hot but there is a threshold of tolerance to heat; ideal temperatures for maximum performance is about 86 during the day for these summer vegetables.

The heat will also make other crops bolt and become bitter. Spinach, peas and cole crops such as broccoli, Brussels sprouts and cauliflower prefer the cool temperatures of spring and fall and make haste to flower and go to seed when temperatures rise. The current weather may do them in for the season.

Tender lettuces will bolt, too. My first round of tender Bibb and Black Seeded Simpson lettuce will not be happy; but I have plans to seed a second round of summer lettuces (varieties more suited to the heat) that include the bolt resistant Jericho and a "heat wave" mix from Cook's Garden. The summer lettuces can stand some heat but will last longer if I provide some shade.

The fruit of some crops can get sunburned when temperatures are high. Sunscald is common on ripening tomatoes, especially if the plant is a little diseased and the foliage isn't adequately shading the fruit on its own. Think about all the crops that tuck themselves beneath the foliage of the plant ... all of these will get sunburned if left otherwise exposed on a 90 degree, full-sun day. This is where we can step in and help out with some strategically placed homemade shade devices.

Providing a little shade will go rather far when temperatures rise into the 90s and you may want to consider it throughout the garden. You can use lattice work, old screens, shade cloth, old sheets, fine netting or mesh (like what you would use for a wedding veil).

Concrete blocks, bricks or terracotta flower pots can provide the base on which a screen can rest several inches above a low growing crop such as lettuce. A picnic table bench works great as a prop for a screen set on a slant on the south side for crops that are of medium-height; and using a shade cloth tied to four bamboo stakes can shade anything at any height from above or on a slant depending on the length and placement of the stakes. You get the idea.

If we continue to get ample moisture we will be lucky because the high heat will make plants transpire moisture through their foliage at a faster rate than they can take it up through their roots. Wilting due to this transpiration may occur which doesn't necessarily mean the soil is dry. If a plant recovers overnight then you know that the wilting was caused by rapid transpiration not thirst. Extra shade will help offset this; and, if you never mulched your vegetables now would be the time to reassess that decision. Mulch helps keep the soil moist but it helps keep it a bit cooler, too.

Pets of the Week

The Humane Society of Nelson County is in the back of the Nelson County Fairgrounds. For more information call the animal shelter at 349-2082. Visit the Web site www.ncanimalservices.org.

CARSON

Carson is a 4-year-old tan and white Pomeranian. He is fine with other dogs and came to the shelter with his friend, Lexi. Both are indoor dogs and would do best in an adult family.

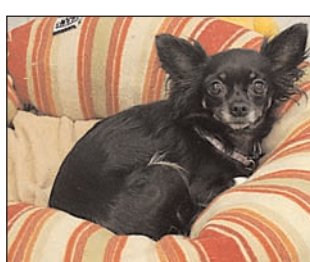

HEIDI

If you have been looking for a gentle calico then Heidi might just be the calico for you. This kitten is about 5 months old and still quite playful. She is a bit shy at first but warms up after a while. Kids older than 12 suggested.

KIP

Kip is a very soft buff-and-white cat about 1-1/2 years old. He loves to be close and will seek you out to get some attention. Kip is good with other cats.

LEXI

Lexi is a 3-year-old tri-color Pomeranian. She is very shy but with TLC will warm up. Lexi came with Carson and it would be great if they could go home together. They are companions and it would be hard to separate them.

Flaget Cancer Center's support group gives patients hope

If you're facing a cancer diagnosis, connecting with others who have walked in your shoes can be a source of the greatest comfort and support. That's why staff members at Flaget Memorial Hospital's Flaget Cancer Center offer a Cancer Support Group. It meets every third Thursday of the month at 6 p.m. at the center, inside the medical building next to the hospital. This month's group will meet May 17.

For some, the group offers a newly diagnosed patient a chance to find out what he or she is about to experience. For patients who have beaten cancer, it's a chance to give back to their community, to celebrate a victory — and to provide hope to those who desperately need it.

Flaget Cancer Center Director Bobbi Harned, R.N., B.S.N., sees the connection between new patients and 'veteran' patients as "very beneficial."

"The patient who has gone through chemotherapy or radiation or both is able to let the new patients know — this is what I experienced, and this is how I dealt with it," Harned said. "The outside support, coming from outside their family circle, especially when their family may not understand exactly what they're going through — it's so helpful."

Some patients who are a year into remission still come to the group to offer their phone numbers and their email addresses and their assistance to patients struggling with cancer and with treatment, Harned said. "It's like being part of an extended family. The more experienced patients are willing to tell their story. They want to tell it to help somebody else. It gives them the satisfaction of knowing that what they have been through was not in vain; they are going to be able to do something good with their life."

Harned has been a nurse for many years. Cancer care is a richly rewarding type of care, she said. And the support group is an inspiring on-the-job experience.

"We always have a nurse in the group, a social worker, a chaplain. Sometimes family members attend. We always pick a topic for the meeting, like relaxation techniques, or appetite.

Eventually we get around to emotions."

There is one sure thing about a cancer diagnosis, Harned said.

"You are going to need support, because you feel alone and isolated, especially with a breast cancer diagnosis. Within a month, a patient seems to have lost all control of her life. She's on the treatment schedule now. It helps to talk about it."

For years, the closest cancer support group was in Louisville or Elizabethtown, she said.

"We're very excited to offer this badly-needed support in our own community."

Flaget honors nurse with Daisy Award for extraordinary nursing Flaget Memorial Hospital has named Andrea Ames, R.N., as a DAISY Award winner for the first quarter of 2012. The award is part of the DAISY Foundation's national program to recognize the super-human efforts nurses perform every day.

Ames is an Obstetrics Department nurse at the hospital who also serves in the Emergency Department. She was chosen based on her dedication to her patients, and to the mission of the hospital, according to Jan Myers, R.N., house supervisor.

"Andrea is equally proficient in two critical care units: the Emergency Department and the OB Department," Myers said. "All in all, working with Andrea is a joy!"

agrees totally with that assessment.

"Andrea takes pride in her job both on OB and ED," Arnold said. "She helps out so much and is very intelligent regarding the babies. She is very compassionate and reverent."

Flaget President Sue Downs, M.S.N., C.E.N.P., is proud that Flaget is among the hospitals participating in the national Daisy Award program.

"Nurses are unsung heroes," Downs said. "It's important that our nurses know their work is highly valued. The DAISY Foundation provides a way for us to demonstrate our gratitude for their remarkable clinical skill and their compassionate care. Andrea is recognized as an outstanding role model in our nursing community."

Every three months, a nurse is selected by Flaget's nursing staff administration to receive the DAISY Award. The honoree receives a certificate of commendation, a DAISY Award pin, and a sculpture hand-carved

>> AROUND KENTUCKY

Here's a sampling of events you might want to check out

Through May 13: Brescia University is exhibiting paintings of Erwin “Lex” Shipley in the Anna Eaton Stout Art Gallery on the second floor of the Campus Center.

Shipley’s work, which has been collected by many of the people who became aware of him through the 1970s and 1980s in Owensboro and is sometimes categorized as “naïve” and “primitive,” is in a personalized, untrained style similar to that of Van Gogh.

Shipley painted and sold a fair number of his work at the Townhouse Restaurant.

This exhibit, which is compiled from the collections of fans from coast to coast, memorializes the unique energy and humor of this extraordinary man.

The Anna Eaton Stout Art Gallery is open Monday – Friday 8:30 a.m.-4 p.m.

Through Aug. 26: A new exhibit, “About Face:

Kentucky Artisan Works Inspired by the Human Face,” at the Kentucky Artisan Center at Berea, will be on display through Aug. 26.

This exhibit features a wide range of works in which the human face is a central element, focal point or inspiration. Created by 43 Kentucky artisans working in photography, painting, fiber, clay, gourds, wood, bronze, collage and mixed-media, this exhibit showcases realistic and abstract works.

The center’s exhibits, shopping and travel information areas are open winter hours daily 9 a.m.-6 p.m., with the café open 9:30 a.m.-3:30 p.m. Admission is free. The center features works by more than 650 artisans from 100 counties throughout the state. For more information call (859) 985-5448 or visit www.kentuckyartisancenter.ky.gov.

May 11: Summer Lovin’ Luau 7-10 p.m. at the National Guard Armory in Elizabethtown sponsored by J29 Project. For teens ages 13-16. Music, food, fashions and door prizes. Featured guests are Jamee McAdams, Kegan

The Depot is in the heart of Old Town at 201 N. Broadway. For more information, call (800)-598-5263.

May 19: The 20th annual Kentucky Wine and Roses Herb Festival 9 a.m.-3 p.m. May 19 sponsored by the Kentucky Herb Association at Lakeview Park in Franklin County Fairgrounds (just off U.S. 460 in Frankfort). No charge for the festival but there is a $3 parking fee. Vendors, exhibits, auctions and food available. For more information, call Sue Wash (502) 535-6885 or visit www.kyherb.com.

May 26: Wine Trail Murder Mystery 10 a.m. at Springhill Winery, Chuckleberry, McIntyre’s, Lover’s Leap Winery, Chrisman Mill Winery, Horseshoe Bend

Ticket price is $20 per person that covers an admission wristband and wine tastings from the participating wineries. Each winery will give participants the chance to experience award winning wines and to guess who murdered the notorious pirate Captain William Kidd. Ahoy, the Pirate Council wants you to interview all the suspects and other “persons of interest” when you find them at each participating winery along the Wine Trail. You will meet 10 ruthless pirates to investigate, each has a motive, means, and opportunity to murder. Cast your vote on who committed the dastardly deed at the last winery you attend. The council has posted a bounty (door prize) of pirate booty to award the chosen correct vote. Dress up pirate style so you won’t have to walk the plank while you are aboard the Wine Trail. Pick up a Wine Trail Passport that list the locations of Participating Wineries, plus you can earn extra treasures by visiting at least eight wineries.

Call (502) 252-9463 for more information.

Attention, chocolate lovers: Prepare to start swooning

DEAR ABBY: I have heard that your dessert recipes are fabulous and I'd like to have them. I saw a column in which you mentioned your cookbooks. I hope I'm correct about this, because I'd be interested in getting them. I have your booklet of poems and essays, which I have read and enjoyed many times.

JEANNE PHILLIPS

>> DEAR ABBY
Syndicated Columnist

Would you print your personal favorite dessert recipe and let me know how to get your cookbooks? Warmest wishes to you, Abby, and thank you for all your columns.

ANITA B.
IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR ANITA: You are welcome. It's hard for me to choose just one recipe because I have a notorious sweet tooth, and my cookbooks contain more than a few that I have enjoyed many times. However, because you asked for my personal favorite, it would be one that not only I have enjoyed, but also one I have made for friends as gifts — Regency Brownies With Chocolate Frosting. (Because the recipe yields 4 1/2 dozen, I confess I usually keep the "extra" six to munch on myself.)

BROWNIES

1 cup butter (2 sticks)
4 ounces bitter-sweet chocolate
2 cups sugar
4 eggs
1 cup all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon salt
2 cups chopped walnuts

1 teaspoon vanilla FROSTING

1 cup heavy cream
8 ounces bittersweet chocolate, finely chopped
Preheat oven to 350 degrees.
Line the bottom of an 18x12x2 (or 1)-inch baking pan with baking parchment paper and spray generously with butter-flavored cooking spray.

In the top of a double boiler, over medium heat, melt butter and 4 ounces chocolate. Reserve.

In a large bowl, beat sugar and eggs until fluffy. Add flour and salt, mixing well. Add chocolate mixture, blending thoroughly. Stir in nuts and vanilla.

Pour into prepared baking pan.

(Batter should be about 1/2 inch thick, NOT MORE.) Bake for 35 to 40 minutes, or until top is crisp and toothpick inserted into center comes out clean. Cool before pouring frosting over the top.

For the frosting: Bring cream to a boil, stirring constantly. Place chopped chocolate in a medium bowl; pour boiling cream over the chocolate and stir to blend well. Spread thin layer of warm frosting over top of brownies in pan. When cool, cut into 2-inch squares.

My cookbooklet set contains not only many easy-to-prepare crowd-pleasing recipes, but also tips on entertaining. It can be ordered by sending your name and address, plus check or money order for $14 (U.S. funds) to: Dear Abby — Cookbooklet Set, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, IL 61054-0447. Shipping and handling are included in the price. If you're a serious chocolate lover, these brownies will make your toes curl, and that's a promise. With summer coming and families gathering for the holidays, now's the time to dust off your favorite picnic and barbecue recipes. My dessert recipes have started many a family tradition.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★★ You have the ability to carry out the best laid plans. You are a force to be dealt with, and you aren't afraid of being a leader. You'll transform a situation in such a way that others finally will respond to a leader. Tonight: A must appearance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★★ Keep reaching out for others with determination and vigor. Evaluate an issue thoroughly, seek out other opinions and speak to a person you respect about the dilemma at hand. You will get answers. Trust your ability to get past problems. Tonight: Visit friends.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★★ Deal directly with someone you care about. Your ability to clear up problems and handle issues is dependent on this person's good will. Do not kid yourself. What might seem like an unavoidable argument will actually clear out some negativity. Tonight: Dinner for two.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★★ Defer to others, and you'll gain a deeper understanding of what is possible. You could be overwhelmed by all of your options and might not be exactly sure about which way to go. Your resourcefulness will bring results. Tonight: Accept an invitation.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★★ You have a way about you that attracts many people. Your laughter and sense of direction help you and also those around you. Focus on a project that could impact you financially. You have reflected on this matter for a while. Tonight: Choose a stress buster.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★★ Funnel your imagination into a fun project. A child or loved one senses your energy and naturally wants to draw you in. Establish limits and know when to say "no." A partner acts in the most unpredictable manner. Tonight: Put your feet up.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★★ Getting going could have you grumbling. If you are really out of sorts, a change of plan might be a great idea. Listen to news more openly. A partner does the unexpected. Stop, think ... then react. Tonight: Head home early.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★★ You have a lot on your mind. In a sense, you feel inspired — it's as though you have a muse in your life. Open yourself up to possibilities, and do not negate an idea too fast. There could be a different path that would delight you and the others involved. Tonight: Order in.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★★ You might want to rethink a personal matter. On some level, you might like to daydream about what could have been, as opposed to dealing with reality. Once you decide to put 100 percent into a situation, rewards will become possible. Tonight: Happy at home.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★★ You beam in whatever you desire. Your instincts lead you down the right path. The unexpected might toss some pebbles in your path, but that will not stop you. Reach out and respond to someone at a distance. Tonight: Togetherness is the theme.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★★ Sit back, and let others run the show. You might think that you can do it better, or perhaps you are relieved not to be carrying this burden. Some people will react in a surprising fashion. Be willing to flex. Tonight: Extra R and R.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★★ It seems as if others think they know better than you. The confusion that ensues might give you a chuckle, but remember to say little. In the long run, you know what is going to happen. Use care with your finances. Tonight: Where the gang is.

YOUNG JOURNALIST GETS THE SCOOP ON HEALTHY FARMING PRACTICES

Farming That is Good for Mother Earth and YOU!

By Samantha Anderson, 5th Grade

Joel Salatin is a farmer working a farm called Polyface. He and his family own and run the farm in the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia. Polyface was first bought as an aged, worn-down piece of land by Joel's parents and has now become a world-famous producing farm.

Farming Freedom

This farm is unlike most other farms. Anyone can Polyface freely, 365 days a year. If you were to visit, you might notice that Joel is a busy farmer. A couple of things Joel and his family stay busy with is moving cows from pasture to pasture and processing their own meat. They do not ship their meat; they want it as as possible.

Polyface farm raises many different types of animals, unlike most of today's mass-production farms. Some animals on Polyface are chickens, cows, turkeys and meat rabbits. The cows are herded from pasture to pasture eating grass and weeds.

Joel's son, Daniel, cares for the rabbits. Daniel began raising rabbits in the 1980s and came across a type of rabbit that can eat grass and without getting sick. The rabbits are moved daily with the chickens to a place called the Raken house where they live with the chickens for a short while.

To find out what the word Polyface means, unscramble each word.

How many eggs can you find on this page?

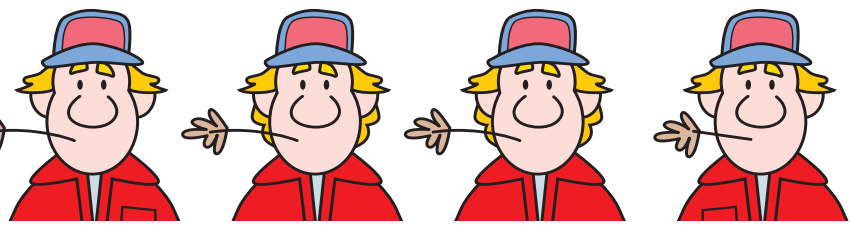

Samantha Anderson loves to write and she cares about Mother Earth. She combined these two interests when she interviewed a farmer in Virginia who uses healthy farming practices. Samantha's entry won the Kid Scoop Foundation's Hometown Heroes essay contest.

A Farm With Principles

Not a principal like at your school – but principles, which means rules or guidelines.

Polyface has many principles of farming, such as all livestock is grass fed and all animals are treated with respect. They always respect the "piggyness" of a pig. In the production of a pig, most farmers' or businesses' pigs stand all day, packed together, eating from a trough, changing their life and instincts. Polyface's pigs have their own pastures and enjoy eating what they are given.

Extra! Extra! From the Farm

Look through the newspaper for pictures of things that are made from animals and plants raised on farms. For example, the leather of shoes comes from a cow and the flour in bread comes from wheat. Cut out five of these pictures and then label them with one or more plants or animals that they are made from.
